Mann Library Exhibits

- Portraits of Progress: Improving Nutrition and Health in India
  - Are you interested in helping to make the world a healthier, safer place? This exhibit will introduce you to people that are doing exactly that. For the past five years, farmers and community leaders in India have been working with researchers at the Tata Cornell Institute to find ways to make nutritious food more available to more people. Drop by the Mann Gallery to see what they’ve been working on—and you’ll walk away with a better idea of what it means to be helping create a healthier future for people on Planet Earth. Mann Gallery, 2nd floor, 8:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.

- Film screening: RiverBlue
  - As part of “Earth Day for a Week” at Mann Library, we’re showing the movie RIVERBLUE. This film follows river conservationist Mark Angelo, as he investigates an important problem: The pollution that the textile and fashion industries is causing in rivers around the world. Come ready to learn about some important connections in our global economy and ecosystem—and about some promising solutions! Room 160, 3:00 – 4:30 p.m.

- Make things! Create Art!
  - Know what a makerspace is? Here’s your chance to find out. Drop by the mannUfactory makerspace to explore an exciting universe of creative possibilities—from 3D printing and virtual reality to button making and hands-on crafts—that our new makerspace facility offers to visitors of all fields, backgrounds and skill levels. And while you’re here, be sure to put your creative genius to work on our Conservation Collage that we’re producing with upcycled materials (magazines, book jackets and other stuff) to celebrate the week’s Earth Day message. Join us to help make a community statement or just to create some beautiful earth-themed art! Room 112, 10:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.
